(En)gendering EU citizenship: caught between paid work and the market

Dr Sandra Mantu

Assistant Professor, Centre for Migration Law
Radboud University

Abstract

This lecture examines how gender intersects with EU citizenship and argues that the extent to which EU citizenship rules accommodate migrating women and their experiences should be part of a critical discussion on how EU citizenship changes, recalibrates or reinforces the nexus between paid work and mobility.

Biography of the speaker

Sandra Mantu is specialized in European migration law with a special emphasis on European citizenship and its relation to national citizenship. In 2014, Sandra defended her PhD thesis that dealt with the legal rules and practices of citizenship deprivation in a selection of EU Member States and their link with EU citizenship. She has been involved in several EU funded projects looking at the legal aspects of EU citizenship and EU migration and mobility frameworks. She is currently key staff member in the CMR's Jean Monnet Centre of Excellence work programme and main researcher in EXPULCIT a project that focuses on the expulsion of EU citizens from host Member States. Her most recent publication is a co-edited volume with Carolus Grutters and Paul Minderhoud, Migration on the Move - essays on the dynamics of migration (Brill 2017).
