

International Intellectual Property Law

ECTS: 5

KSL Root Number: 422155

This class is an introduction to international intellectual property law from a comparative perspective. The class consists of three themes. First, it will explore the basic principles of international intellectual property law as reflected in international treaties. Second, students will learn about the network of international treaties in the field of intellectual property law, in particular trademark, patents, copyright, and design law. Third, a number of current issues regarding intellectual property law will also be studied. The class will be fully conducted in English. The format of the course is designed to be part lecture and part discussion of leading cases from multiple jurisdictions worldwide. Students will be expected to prepare for class discussions.
