ACHIEVEMENTS AND HURDLES TOWARDS BEIJING+30: WOMEN'S HUMAN RIGHTS UNDER DEMOCRATIC REGRESSION

5 May 2021, 12:30-13:30

Abstract

In 2020, the 64th session of the UN Commission on the Status of Women (CWS) celebrated the 25th anniversary of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action that serves as the roadmap of the women's human rights for realizing gender equality in full terms. 189 States supported the Beijing roadmap in the strongest political terms for concerted actions. Despite achievements towards gender equality under active oversight of women's organizations, the blueprint of the Beijing Platform of Action needs still to be recommitted after 25 years. The CWS reiterates the "mutually reinforcing relationship" between achieving gender equality and the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action as well the gender-responsive implementation of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. The women's NGOs recall substantial action before 2030 by drawing attention to a regime of gender inequality and the slow progress towards empowerment of women and girls. While the gender equality gaps in education, political, economic participation, and health are priorities of concern at the global level, the COVID-19 has increased the violence against women and women's unemployment due to isolations and occupational clustering worldwide. Against such a backdrop, the global regression and/or stagnation in democracy create a new contestation area focusing on gender equality having commonalities in different countries.

This lecture will elaborate on the future of women's human rights as promised by the States in the Beijing Platform of Action in the light of diffusion of gender backlash strategies and democratic regression. In this respect, the current discussions in Turkey, Poland, and Hungary will be a matter of interest for predictions.
